

Impressions of three website designs

Debby Smith

I find the first option, "The Refined" classic design, familiar and accessible.

The one-long-page design, (#2), is confusing and I think it is more difficult to locate the specific info that the viewer is looking for.

The third option is also clean and easy to navigate, and I really like the visual content on each topic page. I don't understand what is meant by "a single page with bold visual cards." I click on the labels at the top of the home page, just like drop-downs, and that takes me where I want to go. So having visited all three again, my choice is the third option. It is visually attractive and feels contemporary. I think it will be inviting and engaging and even intriguing to potential record and visitors.

Personally, I really like version 2, that said, I think version 3 would probably be the best to visually show the community and our future rector who All Saints is.

There are aspects of each design that I love, so it's hard to choose the one that gives me the strongest "feeling" for future visitors and our next Rector. I keep leaning towards #3, The Gathering. I think that it best represents All Saints' atmosphere, welcomes everyone to worship, leads with the most important things first.

Knowing that details from the other two designs can be brought over, too, helps me make the choice of #3, as there are aspects of each that I think are beautiful and hit the mark, too.
